Cessna Selects Radiant Power to Supply Wireless Emergency Lighting Battery Packs for the New Large-Cabin Latitude Aircraft

Sarasota, FL – Radiant Power Corp, a subsidiary of HEICO Corporation (NYSE: HEI, HEI.A), was selected by Cessna Aircraft to supply emergency power supplies for the new Latitude business jet.

Radiant Power has expanded their relationship with Cessna Aircraft through a recent award for an emergency power supply on the new Latitude aircraft program. This latest application of Radiant Power’s portfolio will incorporate all of the benefits of proven designs; while bringing a system to market that will offer the Cessna customer base a solution to reduce maintenance costs in the field.

Through sophisticated design concepts, Radiant Power has developed circuitry to reduce both the storage and field maintenance requirements for the aircraft operator. This coupled with proven battery technologies will create a piece of equipment that will serve the Latitude platform for many years to come.

“This new design will bring new levels of reliability to this advanced aircraft design. The Radiant team is grateful for the trust Cessna Aircraft has put in our organization and in our ability to support the Latitude platform for many years to come.” remarked Chuck Schofield, Sr. Vice President for Radiant Power Corp.

Located in Sarasota, Florida, Radiant Power Corp is focused on the design and manufacture of emergency power supplies, power distribution and controls, sensors and indicators, and passenger comfort products for the aerospace and military markets.
